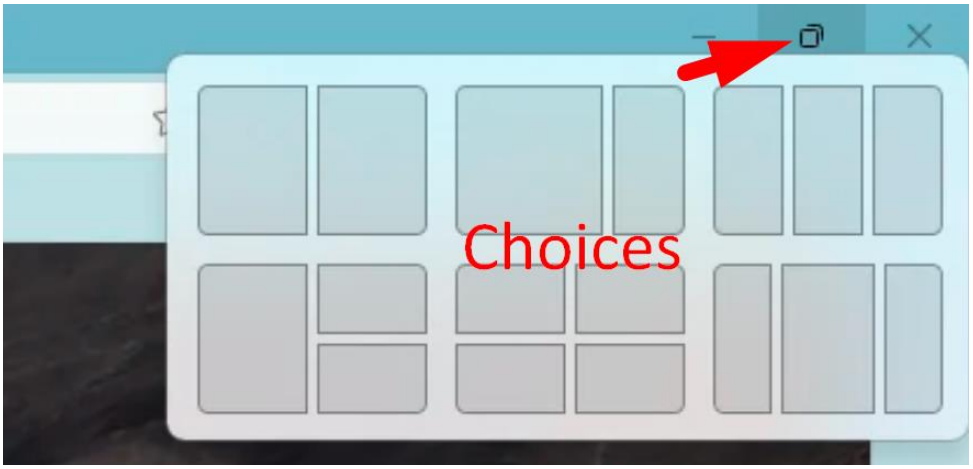
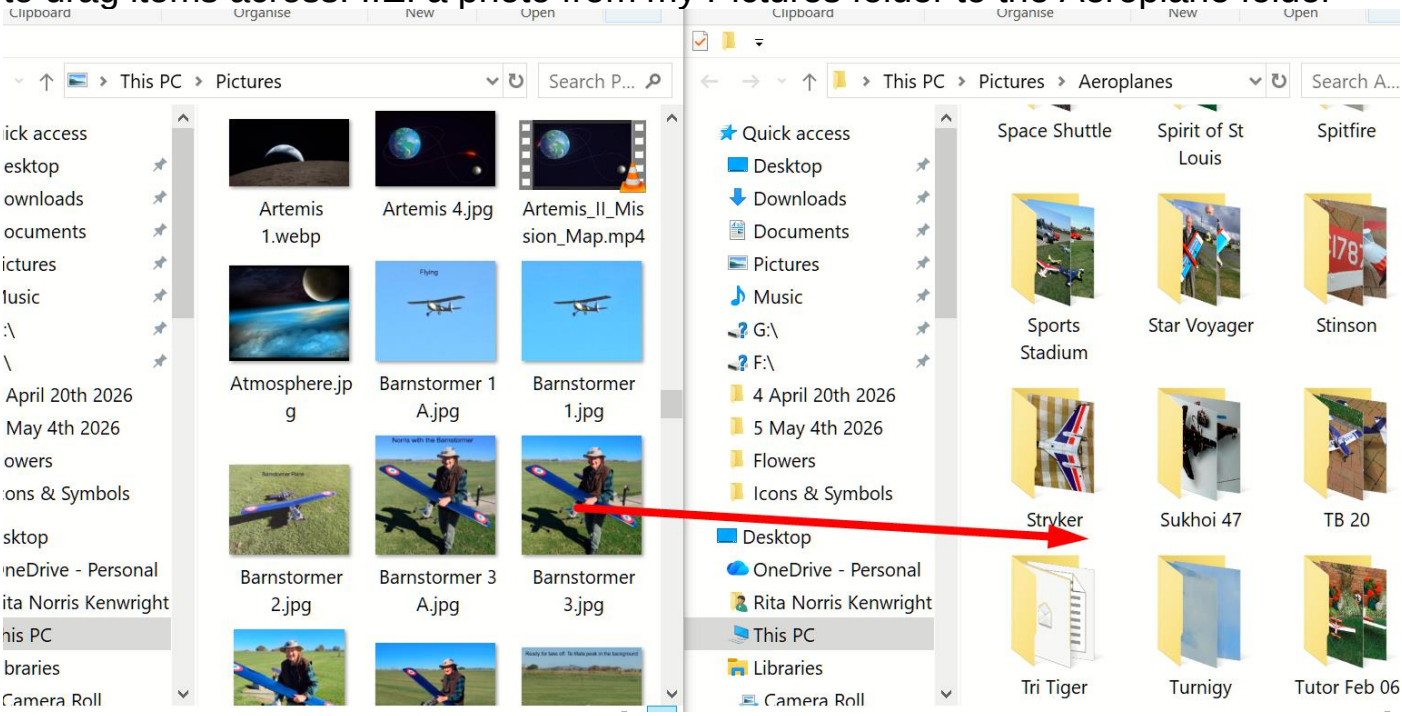
Windows Tiling in 10 and 11

In windows 11 there has been a considerable improved tiling than in Windows 10. When you wish to have an open program half or quarter size you can hover over the resize squares on the top right of the tool bar for several choices. It is called “Snapping the window”. I use this frequently to drag items from one window to another.



Open one file and choose its position. Open another file and choose that position. There are 17 choices.


In Windows 10 you can only fill exactly half the screen. This allows you to have two windows side-by-side to drag items across.
To do this open one window and press Windows Key + Left Arrow or Windows Key + Right Arrow. Then do the same with another open window this time using the opposite arrow key rather than the first one and you can have them side by side to drag items across. I.E. a photo from my Pictures folder to the Aeroplane folder